THE CITY'S MOWING SEASON IS NOW UNDERWAY

More days are added to the right of way mowing schedule

INDIANAPOLIS – Whenever it's not raining, residents can count on crews to cut the grass along the City's rights of way and medians. The work has started and the City has added two additional days to its right of way mowing schedule. For the first time in many years, crews will cut the grass on the City's rights of way six times this year. Before this change, workers cut the rights of way four times a year.

The grass on the medians of the City's main thoroughfares is also getting attention. The mowing contractor, BHB Lawn Care Service, will cut the grass on about 290 segments. Right now, crews are mowing medians in Center, Washington, Warren, and Perry Townships. Once that cycle is complete, crews will begin to mow in the other townships.

The mowing schedule is dependent on weather conditions. An abundance of rain, Knozone Action Days, and drought conditions can impact mowing days. But when there's favorable weather, the City will stay on schedule.
